Not all the people feel thus, but their is a arger proportion here who do then anywhere blas. Two years ago Sir Robert Montgomery, the retiring Lieutenant-Governor of the Punjab, spoke to the Sikh and other chieftsins about the importance of educating their daughters. They listened. and believed that he really spoke for their good Immediately they established schools of their own with sometimes a small measures of Government help, and now there are no fewer than 13,000 girls under regular instruction. Men in the Punish seem to me to love their work, and to set about performing it with steadfast courage, unsullied honour, and an earnest desire, above all things, to do wall. I do not say that it is otherwise in Lower Bengal, but there favouritism prevails more than here. A man is known to be useful as a scribbler in newspapers, and he gets proforment; and the best men have an atrociona climate and a misoreble, impracticable race to deal with.
